

LA FOLLETTE GETS SEVERE REBUKE AT PUBLISHERS' DINNER

DON. SEITZ TAKES EXCEPTION TO REMARKS OF WISCONSIN SENATOR AND MAKES STATEMENT TODAY.

NEWSPAPER ATTACKS

Made by La Follette Declared Malicious Wicked and Untruthful— "Senator Wipes Himself Off the Map."

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 3.—The dinner of the Periodical Publishers' association did not break up until an early hour this morning and its close was marked by a denunciation of Senator La Follette by Don. Seitz of the American Publishers' association who acted as toastmaster.

Senator La Follette began his speech near midnight and spoke for nearly two hours. The more than six hundred editors were visibly weary and toward the close of his speech frequently interrupted him.

Much of his speech was devoted to the money power and an attack upon the sincerity of the newspaper press of the country.

When he had finished toastmaster Seitz said: "I shall not attempt to have the time to come to the defense of the newspapers of the country which have been foolishly, wickedly and untruthfully assailed."

Senator La Follette made no sign of hearing the caustic remark which was uttered in a half angry tone.

Seitz today, in an interview, said: "As the banquet was given by the magazine publishers and as I was a guest of Cyrus I. K. Curtis, president of the association, I had to be cautious in my remarks to Senator La Follette."

"I don't recall exactly what I said when the Senator had finished, but I do remember declaring that the Senator had made an unjust, unkind and wilfully malicious attack on the newspapers of the nation, and if I had had time I would have said something stronger on the subject."

"Last night's dinner, during which we thought we would 'josh' the statesman, ended in a calamity. It was a tragedy for Senator La Follette, for he himself wiped himself off the map."

"Undoubtedly he came to Philadelphia with the intention of making the address of his life, and when it developed in an informal slander of the newspapers and a wallowing in cynicism, I realized that the man had overstepped his mark."

"Previous to that time the Senator had talked for more than two hours, and when he concluded I certainly rebuked him. In my mind the Senator did not know the relationship which existed between the newspapers and the nation, and he came to attack the former to curry favor with the latter."

In the portion of the Senator's speech to which Seitz took exception the senator said that the money power had gained control of industry and government and controlled the newspaper press.

CABINET OF SERBIA FORCED TO RESIGN

Discovery "Black Hand" Conspiracy and Unpopularity of Parliament Are Causes.

Belgrade, Serbia, Feb. 3.—The Serbian Cabinet has resigned. The minister took this step partly on account of the discovery of what is known as a "black hand" conspiracy in the country; to force King Peter to dismiss the radical cabinet or to advocate in favor of the crown prince. Another reason for the resignation is that the popularity of the parliament has declined considerably.

CREW OF ALLEGHANY IS TAKEN TO SHORE BY BRITISH VESSEL

Men on American Steamer Which Was Sunk Early Today in Collision Taken to Newport News.

New York, Feb. 3.—Wireless messages were received here this morning from the revenue cutter Onondaga, which gave the information that the British steamship Pomarona which yesterday collided with and sank the American steamer Alleghany bound for the West Indies, had passed Kiel of the Horseshoe Light Ship, and was within a few miles of Newport News at two thirty o'clock this morning.

The collision occurred seventy-five miles northeast of Cape Henry and the Pomarona took the passengers and crew of the Alleghany on board and then, conveyed by the revenue cutter, steamed for Newport News.

The following wireless was received: "Leaving steamer Pomarona at 2:30 A. M. Kiel of Horseshoe with pilot on board bound for Newport News. Peak full of water. Bulkhead holding well. Am proceeding to break water."

One of the officers of the Hamburg American line said that a wireless dispatch received through the maroon department of the telegraph company reported that the Alleghany had sunk at 12:35 o'clock, seventy-eight miles northeast of Cape Henry, of the two passengers and the crew had been taken aboard the Pomarona. The line was without further information.

MADISON FIRE CHIEF FAVORS INSPECTION

In Testimony Before Fire Insurance Investigating Committee Makes Recommendations for City.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 3.—Under examination by the Wisconsin legislative fire insurance investigating committee yesterday afternoon, Fire Chief C. W. Hoyl of Madison declared that a thorough system of inspection by competent inspectors could reduce the fire loss in Madison by one-half.

Lack of a building code and insufficient fire insurance were two of Madison's deficiencies, he said, although the latter condition is being remedied.

Chief Hoyl testified that his efforts to prevent building of inflammable structures within the fire limits have been nullified by aldermen who gain the common council's approval of such construction on behalf of constituents.

"In helpless," said the chief, "The ordinance is violated continually."

In Chief Hoyl's opinion, Madison rates too high. The fire loss in Madison in the past five years was $177,000 and he estimated the insurance companies have collected $700,000 in premiums in the same period.

Collecting $140,000 a year in premiums, he said, the companies are "cleaning up" $100,000 annually. He complained that local agents refuse to furnish the total losses on burned buildings.

Much time was spent by the committee in ascertaining water supply and pressure conditions in Madison. The city is gradually building larger mains to permit better pressure. Inadequate amount of water mains, he said, is also embarrassing the superior, department and other Wisconsin fire departments, according to statements of the chief.

Chief Hoyl said, Madison's water supply is unaffordable, he said, but there is deficiency in the number of hydrants.

Chief Hoyl came out strongly for a fire prevention education, declaring it is much more important to prevent a fire than to put it out. He is soon to deliver talks to Madison schools on the need of fire prevention, believing the appeal should be made to the rising generation.

CRY OF DESPOTISM IS RAISED IN HOUSE

Chairman Underwood, of Rules Committee, Compared With Cannon and Reed—Amendment Fought.

Washington, Feb. 3.—A lively fight in the house today resulted in an amendment offered by Representative Henry of Texas, being adopted by a vote of one hundred and fifty to one hundred, after heated comparisons of "Underwood" with "Cannonism and Reedism" had been made by the leaders on both sides.

Representative Dalzell said, "Your reforms are all shams and frauds. You have taken the power away from the speaker, but you put it in the hands of the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee."

"Instead of Cannonism and Reedism and Crispian, you have today 'Underwoodism,'" and the gentleman from Alabama, with his crown and scepter "like one to the manner born."

Representative Norris of Nebraska, insurance and reformer, who led the fight on Speaker Cannon, declared the change proposed by the democrats would give back to the speaker part of the power that was taken from him and would make the discharge rule practically invalid.

Representative Hardwick of Georgia, democrat, said the change was necessary because "export filibusters" on the republican side have shown that it was unworkable in its present form.

The success of republican leaders in carrying up the democrats through the manipulation of the new "discharge calendar," which was part of the reform program adopted in the last congress, resulted today in the presentation of an amendment by Chairman Henry of the Rules Committee.

The present operation of the rule to discharge committees instead of opposition to prevent "killing" of bills in committees, has resulted in a congestion of business on the so-called "discharge days."

Republican Leader Mann repeatedly has hinted to the democrats that he would show how the new "reform rule" was not workable.

"Gentlemen of the majority, you are on the back track," cried Representative Daniel of Pennsylvania, republican, in opposing the democratic change in rules.

TAMMANY POLITICIAN PASSED AWAY TODAY

Thomas S. Grady, New York State Senator, Dies Today After Illness of Several Weeks.

New York, Feb. 3.—State Senator Thomas S. Grady, widely known in democratic circles in state and nation and familiarly called "The silver tongue orator of Tammany Hall" died at his home here early today.

The senator for many years was the democratic leader in the state senate and had been ill for several weeks and recently underwent an operation in a sanitarium. Yesterday he was brought back to his home on East Thirtieth street where he died. His sister Miss Margaret Grady was with him.

Senator Grady first became widely known following a quarrel with Governor Cleveland. As a result Grady opposed Cleveland's nomination for president. He bolted Cleveland and took the stump with Hon. Butler and together they toured the country. Afterward Cleveland and Grady became reconciled.

Senator Grady was spokesman for Tammany Hall both in the state and national conventions.

There was a thick fog which greatly impeded the progress. Several steamers from the government dock yards are on the spot and a large number of naval divers have gone aboard to examine the wreck. LITTLEFIELD URGES STEPHENSON'S CASE BEFORE COMMITTEE

Denies That Corruption Was Used in Primaries, But States That Such Corruption, If Present, Would Not Unseat Him.

Washington, Feb. 3.—Corruption in a senatorial primary does not alone corrupt a United States senator's election, according to arguments presented to the senatorial committee on privileges and elections today in behalf of Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin. Former Representative Charles E. Littlefield of Maine, as counsel for Senator Stephenson, in connection with that statement, however, denied that there had been any corruption in the Stephenson primary.

He said a corrupt influence by a senator, or his responsible agents, coupled with submission to it and participation in it by members of the legislature were necessary to taint a senator's election.

The sub-committee had already exonerated him.

"Verily there several members of the legislature who said they voted for Senator Stephenson because of the primary vote," asked Senator Lea.

"Yet you say the senate cannot investigate the primary?"

"Yes."

Senator Oliver announced that if there had been corruption in the primaries he wouldn't be influenced in his vote by the legal proposition.

"So you better come down to something else," concluded Senator Oliver. "Mr. Littlefield suggested it would be a pretty big field if the senate created an investigation of the senatorial primaries."

VERNE D. CRALL RESIGNS POSITION WITH RECORDER.

Circulation Manager of Morning Daily Has Accepted Position of Similar Nature on Milwaukee Journal.

AFFAIRS POLITICAL THROUGHOUT COUNTY

CANDIDATES FOR STATE SENATE ARE MAKING READY FOR CAMPAIGN.

CANDIDATES APPEAR

Delegates to the National Convention Must Also Be Chosen Very Shortly.

With the redistricting of Rock county into two instead of three assembly districts and the changing of the state Senatorial district so as to include Walworth county, has caused considerable confusion to the politicians generally. Candidates for the new Senatorial district have already begun active operations and plans are being made to have a conference of the radical republicans soon with an idea of handling both the assembly districts as well.

L. E. Gottle of Edgerton, present assemblyman from what was the old first assembly district which included the northern portion of the county, is the first real aspirant for Senator Whithead's seat to enter the field. That he is an avowed candidate is certain and will push his candidacy from now on is known. Meanwhile the Beloit contingent are grooming Mayor Cunningham for the nomination and will use all their influence to secure the cooperation of the Walworth county delegation to help them. Beloit also has another Senatorial possibility in the person of J. N. Chambliss, who two years ago made the candidate of the progressive campaign against Senator Whithead. Senator Whithead is insistent that he will not under any conditions become a candidate again despite the urging of his friends in the district. Janesville will probably have a candidate in the person of present Assemblyman Grant U. Fisher. Mr. Fisher has been urged by friends in Walworth county and throughout Rock to make the race and with the Beloit vote divided, Gottle drawing from the northern half of the county it would leave Walworth to decide the candidate at the primaries.

Should Fisher decide to make the race for the Senate it would leave the assemblyman from the first district, which now includes Janesville, to be selected. It has been rumored that S. B. Houditch, Beloit, might make the race while Evansville, might ask for consideration. Wilbur P. Carlo has also been talked of, but thus far no known aspirants have been known to even consider the position. In the second assembly district Simon Smith, present assemblyman from Beloit, will doubtless be the candidate whether he will have opposition or not remains to be seen.

Another question that is bothering the politicians is the question of representatives of the first congressional district at the national republican convention. Recently the progressives held a conference in Walworth where it was decided to name C. H. Grossman, H. A. Cooper and a Beloit representative. At a similar county informal meeting held in Walworth county, Alexander E. Matheson of this city was suggested by the friends of President Taft as their choice for a delegate and it is certain now that some definite organization with this in view will be held in a few days.

Meanwhile the democrats are about divided in the county between Wilson and Harmon. J. J. Cunningham, member of the state central committee is most anxious to see Wilson selected while George C. Sutherland and other conservative democrats are said to favor Harmon. Mr. Sutherland by the way is being mentioned most strongly as the democratic choice for the gubernatorial honors. Friends of his throughout the state have urged him to make the race and while he has positively declined to consider it, it is certain an effort will be made later to try and influence him to accept the support of his friends.

In county affairs the republican candidates are the only ones thus far breaking themselves and the office of sheriff is the only place where avowed candidates have appeared in the field. Janesville will probably be represented in the race by Alvin Muehlen, Fred Baneko, both of whom made the race two years ago, Beloit by Cash Whipple and George Merrill, and Frank Roach of the town of Harmony, is also said to be building his fences.

Thus far County Clerk Lee, Clerk of the Court Earle, District Attorney Dunwiddie, County Treasurer Church and Register of Deeds Smiley have discovered no opposition although some may develop. Who the democrats may select is not known but they will have a full ticket in the church party last evening. Following the service of a dinner, this was treated under various heads, Superintendent H. C. Hall, discussing on the subject of training boys to be good citizens, and Clerk of Court Jesse Earle on the necessity and means of sustaining the American spirit of independence. "After the Constitution Form of Government, What?" was the theme of M. O. Monat, and "The Vanguard of Citizenship" was the subject treated by F. P. Lewis.

Chicago & North-Western. GREAT IMPROVEMENTS IN ACCIDENT REPORT

Many Lives Killed and Injured Since 'The Safety Committee Have Been Running.'

Credit must be given to the North-western safety committee for the great decrease in the number of deaths and accidents since last year's report was posted. Twenty men less killed on the whole system and two thousand four hundred less injured in some way during the year 1911. The report for this year is as follows:—Train service, 17 killed, 1875 injured. Switching service, 10 killed, 495 injured. Station service, 2 killed, 573 injured. Trackmen, 30 killed, 1181 injured. Bridges, 2 killed, 225 injured. Car Repair Inspectors 1 killed, 278 injured. Shop and roundhouse men 5 killed, 1117 injured. Other employees, 8 killed, 279 injured.

This makes a total of 76 killed and 6025 injured during the year of 1911 while during 1910 there were 97 killed and 8404 injured, a difference which is very noticeable. Accidents resulting from the carelessness of the injured employees caused 9 deaths and injuries to 151 men which is the largest number of any other cause. The carelessness of other employees caused 204 men to suffer injuries, while in the year before 7 men were killed and 315 were injured. This shows where the safety committee have been getting in their work in preventing carelessness. Cinders and dirt in trainmen's eyes caused 281 injuries, against 470 the year before. Nails injured the feet of 160 men, which is a large number than was injured in this way in 1910. In collisions, three were killed and 103 injured, in comparison with last year's record of 11 killed and 165 injured. Accidents from obstructions overhead were doubled during this last year, there being sixteen reported. This is an item which should be noticed by the committee. As a whole the report shows a great improvement for one year's time, but it is expected that even a greater difference in the numbers will be made in the coming year and it will not be an increase on the debit side, either.

COL. HAMILTON
His Experience in the Army as Well as in His Home.

GALLANT SPANISH-AMERICAN SOLDIER GIVES PRAISE TO PERUNA.

Col. Arthur L. Hamilton, of the Seventh Ohio Volunteers, writes as follows: "I have used Peruna myself and in my family for the last seven years. I have already written you about the good results I experienced with your remedy during the Spanish-American War. "My command used your Peruna during our service in the Spanish-American War, and I will say this, that if the War Department records are consulted, it will be found that the casualties in my regiment were less than in any other regiment of the Army Corps while at Camps Alger, Meade and Bushnell. The total deaths in my regiment during the seven months' service, were seven out of a total number of 1490. I, of course, cannot help but think that Peruna certainly was a great benefit to my command."

Cold Settled on lungs. Mr. Samuel McKinley, 1215 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "I can honestly say I owe my life to Peruna. "Travelling from town to town, having to go into all kinds of badly heated stores and buildings, sometimes standing up for hours at a time while playing my trade as a auctioneer, it is only natural that I had colds frequently. "Last December I contracted a severe case, which, through neglect on my part, settled on my lungs. When almost too late I began doctoring, but without avail, until I heard of Peruna. It cured me, so I cannot praise it too highly."

Head and Nose. Mr. W. J. Harper, Lehigh, Cleveland Co., Arkansas, writes: "I do not know how to express my thanks to you for the good you have done me in treating me for catarrh. "I was continually hacking and spitting, and I had entirely lost my sense of smell. I tried various remedies, but nothing did me any good. At last I tried Peruna as a last resort, and I am thankful to say that after using ten bottles of Peruna I am once more well of catarrh of the head and nose."

NEW TERROR FOR AMERICANS

Montmartre Police Discover Counter-felts of Unusual Quality Are Spread by Anarchists.

Paris.—A new terror has been added to the many in store for the unwary American tourist who patronizes the establishments of Montmartre. The police have just discovered that a band of anarchist culprits has put in circulation over 50,000 francs' worth of bad five-franc pieces.

The leader of the syndicate is an anarchist, Maria Llopis, who was condemned to death for her complicity in the revolt in Barcelona which preceded the execution of Ferrer. The proceeds are probably for the anarchist cause.

The coins are of unusually subtle manufacture, composed of practically the same alloy as the genuine ones and such slight defects that only an expert could have detected them; hence the facility with which they were put into circulation.

They were made in Barcelona, two of the company going there every Friday, returning to Paris on Tuesday with a fresh supply, which they delivered to the other four, who hastened to change them by making small purchases.

These four are now safely under lock and key, but the two who brought the goods from Spain either received warning or stopped behind to participate in the recent outbreak, they holding anarchistic opinion like their chief.

Generous Proportions. The length of the nose of the statue of Liberty is four feet six inches. The distance across the eye is two feet six inches. The right arm, which holds the torch, is forty-two feet long.

Memories Perpetuated

The custom of preserving the memory of our cherished dead has been handed down to us from earliest antiquity. Each race has had some manner of keeping alive thoughts and memories of their departed. The Pyramids of Egypt, The Mounds and Totem Poles of the American Indian stand out as examples. Present day custom favors the erection of a monument of marble or granite, fittingly carved, over the grave of the beloved one.

When the time comes for you to select a monument, it would be best for you to come here. You'll choose but one monument, naturally you want the best. You'll find many designs in beautiful granites and marbles at this shop. The workmanship on the monument you choose will be executed by experts. Chosen now it will be ready to be placed before Memorial Day.

ANNOUNCE PRIZE LIST

Experts From Madison Will Be at City Hall to Judge Exhibits and Talk to Farmers.

The first annual meeting of Rock County Order of Wisconsin Experimental Association will take place at the City hall at Janesville, Saturday, Feb. 10, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Any farmer residing in Rock County, who wishes to better his conditions, will find it to his interest to attend this meeting and become a member. Here he will have an opportunity to hear of the wonderful advancement which has been made by our experimental station in the breeding up of Wisconsin grains. The station has accomplished more along this line than the average person can realize. In every case the pedigree grains have given a yield of from 10 to 18 per cent greater than the scrub grains and the quality is better also.

Wisconsin produces the best barley in the world and there is such a demand both in U. S. and in foreign countries that the State Experimental Association cannot begin to fill the orders which come in every year. China, Japan and Australia bought heavily of our pedigree grains last year and during this winter a Rock County farmer received an order from Oregon, on our western coast, for 25 bushels pedigree barley, and another from the State of New York for 1700 bushels which he was obliged to turn down. This shows that other people think of our seeds.

We are now shipping seed corn to Russia and South Africa, and every corn growing state in America. With such an overwhelming demand for pedigree seed there is no reason why the farmers in Rock County should not discard their scrub seed and begin to grow the varieties which will bring him from $5.00 to $10.00 more per acre.

It is the purpose of this organization to give every progressive farmer in this county an opportunity to obtain a start in the growing of pedigree grains. A very interesting feature of this meeting will be a grain show which will be held in connection. Over $200.00 in cash and premiums will be distributed. This show is open to farmers residing in Rock County only. The business men of Janesville donated this handsome collection of premiums proving their willingness to help along a movement which means greater prosperity among the farmers. This in turn will stimulate business in the city.

The committee on awards brought in a most encouraging report. The banks started the list with $10.00 each. C. H. Olson, Jewellers, donated a handsome silver trophy which will be an exhibition at the city hall during the show.

A classified list of premiums is given below and exhibitors are requested to read carefully the rules and regulations before making entries.

Entries will be open to residents of Rock County only.

Each exhibit must be grown by the exhibitor in the year 1911.

No exhibitor will be allowed to make more than one entry in each class.

No entry fee will be charged and the exhibits will remain the property of the owner.

No admission will be charged. Only one premium will be given on each entry, except in case of apples or raspberries.

Entries will close promptly at 10:00 o'clock Saturday A. M.

Bring your exhibits directly to the city hall, where they will be taken charge of and remain there until they are promptly entered.

Experts will be here from Madison, who will judge the grains and give an instructive talk on the subject of breeding and disseminating of pedigree grains.

"Tonight."

One of the largest audiences of the week attended the Myers Theatre last night to witness the presentation of the four act comedy drama, "One Girl in a Thousand," by the Jack Benney Company. It was a first class performance in every respect, brimful of good comedy, with a strong story and plot which held the interest of the audience to the last curtain. Mr. Benney as Warren Thorpe, the attorney gave an excellent interpretation, while Miss De Fellet in the title role gave him good support. The company were well cast, and it is safe to state it was one of the best offerings of the week. Jack Benney has the best repertoire organization that has been seen here in years.

Tonight the company will close their week's engagement with the four act problem play, "Capital and Labor," which is a comedy drama of the higher order.

H. CHANNING KENT
KILLED ON RAILWAY
NEAR KANSAS CITY

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Kent Received Word This Morning of Death of Their Son in Accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Kent, 503 Cherry street, received word this morning of the death of their son, H. Channing Kent, in an accident on the Santa Fe railroad near Kansas City, Mo. The dispatch which was sent by the division superintendent gave no details of the accident nor did it state the time when it happened but it is thought that he was killed last night or this morning. Mr. Kent wired at once to have the remains shipped to Janesville for interment.

H. Channing Kent was born in this city twenty-seven years ago, and lived here with his parents until about two years ago, when he went west to engage in railroading. He has worked for several companies in and around Kansas City, but had been with the Santa Fe but a short time.

Mr. Kent was well known among the young people of the city. While he attended high school he was renowned as an athlete and excelled in all indoor and outdoor sports. He was particularly a hero on the gridiron and through his superior skill the Janesville eleven won many a football victory. He possessed a genial sunny disposition which made him a favorite with all who knew him.

Besides a father and mother he leaves one sister, Mrs. H. M. Kennedy of Seattle, Wash., and two brothers, Frank and Herbert Edward Kent of Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

It was not known this afternoon what time the body would arrive here and funeral arrangements will be announced later.

NOMINATION PAPERS READY NEXT MONDAY

Blanks to Be Used by Candidates For Mayor and Commissioners Printed by Order of City Clerk.

Blank nomination papers and affidavits of candidacy for the use of those who will be candidates for the nomination of mayor and commissioners at the primaries to be held March 19 are being printed by the order of City Clerk H. M. Cummings and will in all probability be ready for distribution at his office next Monday. The forms used are prescribed by the statute providing for the adoption of the nomination form of government by cities and the nomination papers with the signatures of at least twenty-five bona fide voters and the candidates affidavit must be filed with the city clerk at least twenty days before the primary the last of which will be February 29.

Considerable delay has been experienced in securing the patent from the Secretary of State permitting the city to organize under the commission form. The Secretary's office, while very exacting as to the form of notification required, provides no blanks or forms for that purpose, and considerable correspondence with it has been required to arrive at a proper understanding. The patent is expected to arrive here the first of the week.

Candidates thus far have been nursing their aspirations in quiet, but now that the machinery of the campaign is to be placed in their hands they will undoubtedly make haste to announce their candidacies and secure signatures to their petitions.

Nothing Surprising.

Beautiful Hand.—Two charming women were discussing one day what it is which constitutes beauty in the hand. They differed in opinion as much as the shape of the beautiful member whose merits they were discussing. A gentleman friend presented himself, and by common consent the question was referred to him. It was a delicate matter. He thought of Paris and the three goddesses. Glancing from one to the other of the beautiful white hands presented for his examination, he replied at last: "I give it up; the question is too hard for me. But ask the poor, and they will tell you the most beautiful hand in the world is the hand that gives."

THE VISION AND THE QUEST

By J. TORREY CONNOR

FROM out a swirling cloud of sand a man emerged, moving slowly, painfully, and driving before him a burro heavily laden. The spikes of the Spanish bayonet had rent his clothing, and his bruised feet were ill protected by broken shoes, but he did not heed the prick of the thorns nor the hurt of the bruises. Three men came after him. Two of them were leading pack-animals, and the third, a Mexican, staggering as he walked, bore upon his shoulders the load of the loaded animal they had shot back at the last water-hole. The trackless waste stretched away to the rolling hills, its level expanse unbroken save by giant cacti—those sentinels of the desert standing eternally on guard above the bleaching bones of hapless victims.

It was hot—hot! The sun, a round, unwinking, malignant eye, glared down from a copper-colored sky. The wind that came in little puffs, heaping, leveling, whirling the alkali-dust higher and thither, was like a blast from a furnace.

In the scant shade of the sage-brush and Spanish bayonet blades panted, and the hoarse throat sought shelter in vain. The gusts increased in violence, and blinding sand-showers filled the air.

"Mebbe the Professor knows whar he's goin'," said the man at the tail of the procession. He raised his voice to make himself heard. "If he does, wh'd he hire us to find his gold-mine for him, eh, Williams?"

Williams fell back a pace. "For the pleasure of our sassy, Watkins. What else?" He grinned through cracked lips.

"Wal, this day's my last. I've had enough of it. We shouldn't 'a' left the water-hole. That's a storm comin' up, an'—"

As if in mockery of his words, a mighty gust of wind nearly swept the four men off their feet. Simultaneously, a writhing column appeared to the left, and in a moment they were enveloped in a stifling cloud of sand that stifled the breath and muffled speech impossible.

With one accord they dropped to the ground, and lay with heads covered until the force of the storm was spent. The Professor was first upon his feet. He bent over and touched each man in turn on the shoulder.

Watkins, lifting his head, uttered a startled exclamation. Out of the swirling cloud of darkness had grown an evil face, a face that menaced him. He shuddered involuntarily, and then laughed at himself for a fanciful fool, as with the passing of the blinding gust, the Professor stood revealed.

"I told you for the Mend himself," he said, as he rose slowly. "No wonder! In the yaller light, an' with all this sand in my eye, you sure looked somethin' fierce."

The Professor took no notice of the remark. "Come!" he insisted. "We must go on."

"Oh, senor," the mozo implored, "hasta manant! We would rest." "I ain't goin' a step farther," Watkins doggedly insisted. "The Arizony coyote that'd pick my bones ain't whelped yet. It's no fer the back track. We can make the railroad in four days, an' be in California in a week. Wal, I'd never left it to come on this here fool trip."

A strange light flickered in the Professor's eyes. His lean fingers curved inward, as the claws of a bird of prey. He shot one glance at Watkins, a glance that was at once threatening and defiant—and then turned to Williams.

"You will n-not desert m-me, Williams? It is only for a f-few hours now—a few hours!"

"I'll stand by you, Professor."

"And you, Pedro?"

"I'll tell you what I'll do," Watkins amended, ashamed to find himself the one deserter from the ranks. "We'll camp over thar for the night, an' in the mornin'—"

"Wal, I'll agree to hold the fort here for twenty-four hours. Take the camp outfit with you or not, jes' as you like; but you'd better march light. You say it's a few hours' journey now, Professor? All right. If you don't show up by to-morrow night, I'll hit the high places back to the railroad."

With the suddenness characteristic of the coming and going of desert storms, the wind had subsided, and only by the murky atmosphere could the wanderers have told that the evil spirit of the wilderness had passed that way. Presently night fell, and, gathering round the fire of grease-wood which the Mexican built, they talked or were silent, by turns. The Professor sat alone, as was his custom.

He was of the Tribe of the Wanderer. Foot, this man whose infirmity banished him from the companionship of men. He went up and down the land seeking, and over seeking, that which to him was life itself. In the dust that had been tracked by those a century dead, he sought it. His camp-fires blinked beside many a lonely trail and in solitude unvisited by human kind.

"I reckon he's plum' foolish," said Watkins in a low tone, with a glance at the leader, who, with a dripping candle-end in his fingers, was poring over a tattered parchment.

"You've got another guess comin'," retorted Williams. "Bain' tongue-tied don't keep his brain from workin' proper, does it?"

"It ain't that. It's this hull blamed business o' huntin' fer a gold-mine whar nobody ever heard tell o' thar bein' gold."

"He didn't let on 'twas a gold-mine. He 'lowed he was after treasure." "He's after blood, all right!" Watkins snarled. "Did you see the look he giv' me a while back? It meant murder, or I'm a greaser!"

"Ho!" Williams hooted derisively. "What an onhealthy imagination you must have, Watkins! The Professor? Why, the Professor wouldn't hurt a fly! I went with him once, when he was follerin' up these here cliff-dwellin' people, an' he was like a lamb fer peaceableness the hull time. They do tell, Watkins, that thar was follis a livin' an' eties built here in Ameriky afor Columbus discovered it."

"They do tell that the moon is made o' green cheese?" Watkins mocked. "What's he sayin'?"

The Professor leaned over and thrust the parchment into Williams' hand.

"You see?" he traced the lines with a trembling finger—"the route lies thar, and thar, and t-t-there. You will not fail me, with the end in s-s-sight? Promise!"

And again Williams pledged his word.

"I am not a p-prophet, nor the s-son of a prophet," the Professor went on dreamily, "but I had a vision. It was on the night after the p-purchase came into my possession. The Professor's eyes had in them the look of one who sees things unseen of other men. 'Did you ever hear of t-the Seven Cities of Cibola, Williams?'"

Williams scratched his head restlessly.

"What railroad be they on, Professor?"

"You don't understand? No matter. This is what I saw in my vision; I thought I was w-wanderin' in an accursed p-place that God had made in His anger. I came to a ravine, with a small stream trickling along the bottom of it. I stood above, on the brink of t-t-the ravine."

"Suddenly I noted, on t-the opposite slope, a flight of stone steps, cut in t-the solid rock, and there were endless processions of naked, bleeding slaves, chained together, p-p-goging up and coming down the steps. Where the f-flight ended at t-the top, a huge rock, roughly carved in the f-form of a sphinx, stood guard at the mouth of a cavern."

"As I watched the cowering f-figures, scourged by the m-monsters' whips, it seemed to me that the slaves were c-conveying treasure to the cavern. Those who went up carried burdens, while those who came down were empty-handed."

The Professor's voice trailed off. He gazed fixedly into the darkness.

"Well, an' after that ravine first thing in the mornin', Professor," Williams cheerfully assured him.

"Plumb' foolish!" Watkins retorted, as he settled himself in his blanket for the night.

The sun rose in a configuration of red and gold. The Professor's impatience would hardly brook the delay necessary to the preparation of the morning meal, and that despatched, he insisted upon setting out at once.

The three turned their faces toward the hills. The camp was soon left behind. The country changed and became more broken; the ground, ridged with sharp, black rocks, rising to knolls and dipping to hollows.

A heat-mist rolled from the earth in waves. The distant hills, as seen through the haze, were hurried in outline and indistinct. The Mexican, wiping the sweat from his eyes, trudged on uncomplainingly, but Williams called a halt.

"Ain't thar some other way 'round, Professor?" These stones hurt my feet, an'—"

He stopped and stared at the Professor with seven-league strides that carried him forward rapidly.

The sunburned hills appeared to be no nearer, although for an hour the men kept on across the country as the crow flies. The Professor muttered incessantly and unintelligibly. Williams could only hope that he would tire of the fruitless search and turn back of his own accord.

Then, all in a moment, they were there, standing on the brink of a barranca that, in some volcanic action, had opened—a deep, narrow slit in the ground.

"Do you see it?" the Professor cried, pointing down and across the ravine to where, midway between top and foot and showing black in the wall of rock, the mouth of a cavern yawned beneath an overhanging rock.

"Do you see it?" he cried again, a shrill note of triumph in his voice.

And Williams, his eyes widening with wonder, saw it all, as the Professor had seen it in his vision. There were the cave, the guarding rock, roughly shaped in the form of a sphinx—whether by nature or by the hand of man could not be determined at that distance—and leading from the mouth of the cave a rude flight of stone steps that descended by turns and angles to the floor of the barranca.

"At last! At last!" The Professor's voice rose to a shriek. "After all these years! Success! After all these years! Success! Success! Oh, that I should be the one to find the way! Success! Success! Success!"

Williams momentarily forgot the cause of the Professor's jubilation. Gazing into the man's twitching face, watching, as if fascinated, the writhing of the lean fingers as they plucked and tore at the handkerchief knotted about the skinny throat, he could only grasp the one astonishing fact: The Professor's halting tongue had given utterance to unhalting speech!

Wondering still, he submitted passively when the Professor, laying hold of him, dragged him hither and thither in search of a place where they might attempt the descent in safety.

Thus occupied, the Professor did not perceive that which Williams, scarcely crediting the evidence of his own eyes, saw—the toppling of bushes that stood on the opposite and higher bank, the rattling shower of earth and stones that preceded the dislodgment of the rock which kept guard at the cavern's mouth, the trembling of the ground underneath.

The Professor had espied a pathway where the outcropping of volcanic rock promised a foothold. He turned to the mozo, who, after the manner of his kind, ever followed the leader unquestioningly.

"Come!" he shouted.

But the man, his eyes distended with fear, was tracing the course of a fissure that suddenly had split the ground, separating him from his companions.

"No!" the frightened man protested. He dropped on his knees, crossing himself and calling on his patron saint. "El temblor, senor, el temblor!"

Even as he cried out, the ground under their feet undulated as the waves of the sea. Roused to their danger, the Professor held out his hand to Williams. Together they leaped the widening fissure, and staggering, stumbling like drunken men, gained the solid ground.

As they reached the Mexican's side and faced about, the earth crumbled before their eyes, a huge mass of rock and earth sliding with a muffled roar into the depths of the ravine. Again was felt the undulating motion, so sudden, so violent, that they were thrown on their faces.

After a time the man who had so narrowly escaped death struggled to their feet and stared at each other with blanched faces. Then, in a moment, it all came back to the Professor—the vision and the quest. He remembered why he was there.

"We must get out of thar!" cried Williams, laying his hand on the Professor's shoulder. But the Professor was gazing straight over Williams' head—gazing with an awful look in his eyes at—what?

Involuntarily Williams sent his glance in the same direction. The gaping mouth of the cave no longer showed black against the wall of rock. Buried under thousands of tons of earth that had filled the barranca almost level full, the cavern, the guarding sphinx, and the steps of stone were lost to view.

Williams's glance traveled back to the Professor's face. What he saw caused him to utter an exclamation. It was as if some long-dormant strain of savagery had suddenly changed the gentle, scholarly man of Williams's knowledge to something less than human.

He was terrible in this the hour of his defeat. His yellow teeth were bared, fang-like, in a grimace of rage. Under the bristling gray eyebrows the eyes burned with a light that menaced reason.

As Williams gazed at the distorted visage, the gleam in the Professor's eyes went out as would a candle-flame in a whiff of wind. He sank to the ground, all strength gone from him, and passed his hand across his forehead in a bewildered fashion.

"The v-very sign!" he mumbled. "I did not show you the other p-p-parchment. See, here it is, t-the outline of the s-sphinx."

As Williams stooped to help the Professor to his feet, the slint of yellow light caught his eye. In an instant he was on his knees, digging into the loosened earth with his bare hands. The Mexican, roused to action, joined him, and the two toiled silently, breathlessly.

Presently Williams sprang to his feet, and, seizing the Professor's shoulder, shook him roughly.

"It's thar, Professor!" he shouted into the other's inattentive ear.

"Gold! Gold! Gold! Enough to make us all rich as kings! Don't you see? The gold is thar!"

The Professor lifted a piteous face. In wistful appeal to his companion. "It was not to be, Williams! It was n-not to be! All m-m-m-my life I have b-been willing to deny myself anything, everything, t-to gain the end in v-vision. Why? I would have starved and died happy, if the w-work that lives after the workman—my w-work—had been done."

"Williams, here it w-was that the Seven Cities of Cibola once w-was, and down thar—down thar in t-that cavern—are t-tablets, graven with a p-people's history. That I should have failed! That I should have failed with s-success in s-sight!"

"It is the heat. No?" said the Mexican. "The senor is muy loco. No?"

The professor thrust the parchment into Williams' hand.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

A QUEEN WHO DIED OF A BROKEN HEART.

By A. W. MACY.

On April 8, 1795, Prince George of England, afterward George IV., was married to Catherine of Brunswick, his cousin. It was not a love match, but one of convenience, arranged by the prince's father. Young George consented to the union because his debts, which were stupendous, would thereby be liquidated. He had no love for his bride, and left her at the end of a year. He tried to secure a divorce, but parliament would not grant it. Public sympathy was largely with her, as the prince was considered very much of a scapegrace. When he was crowned king, in 1821, although she had received no summons, Catherine went in state to Westminster abbey, and demanded to be crowned with him. On being refused admission she returned home and in nine days died. It is believed, of a broken heart.

Fun For St. Valentine's Day

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY is one of the most popular anniversaries of the year on which to give parties. With young people, possibly the only other date on the calendar that would outrank it, is Halloween. This year, Valentine's Day will probably be more popular than ever, because being Leap Year, some novelty may be introduced into the parties given.

Valentine Day luncheons, dinners and dances are all popular, as well as gatherings in which appropriate games will be played, instead of indulging in either dancing or cards for amusement.

Decorations should, of course, be largely carried out in rose color, and cupid, hearts and doves, wedding bells, and such sentimental symbols should be used.

For a luncheon or dinner, the centerpiece should be heart-shaped, of red roses or red carnations, or some other rose-hued flowers. A killed arrow properly poised to give the effect of piercing the heart, adds to the Valentine effect. If any Dresden or bisque Cupid figures are owned that can be pressed into service, either as flower-holders or receptacles for salted nuts or bonbons, they come in very appropriately. Cakes, ices and bonbons should all carry out the Valentine idea, and these are not difficult to get nowadays. If place or menu cards are used, these should, of course, be heart-shaped.

For the menu, cream of love-apple soup (tomato), twin-soles, (2 flounders), sweet-breads, tenderloin of beef, turtle-doves (imagination can endow squabs with this name for the occasion), ice cream in the form of doves (caterers will mould it in this design if desired), and kisses, coffee and bonbons, are suitable dishes.

There are so many appropriate amusements for a Valentine party, that a hostess need have little trouble in planning the evening's entertainment. Since it is Leap Year, a Proposal Party is lots of fun.

The men draw from one basket arrows, since it is Leap Year, and from another basket, the girls draw bows. If it isn't wished to give the game, the Leap Year flavor, then the men draw the bows, as being the ones active in the chase, and the girls draw the arrows. Each bow is tied with a piece of ribbon, and there is an arrow tied with ribbon to match. The men fasten the arrows to their buttonholes, or wherever they wish to attach them, and the girls display their bows conspicuously. Each girl must then discover the man wearing the arrow to match her bow, and must contrive within the time allowed, to offer her hand, heart, and worldly goods. The man must do all in his power to stave off the proposal. If it is impossible to get a few words alone with the object of her suit, she may hand a note, or contrive in any way possible to get the proposition to him.

A prize is given for the one who best succeeds in giving her proposal so as to compel a definite answer, and to the man who most cleverly and adroitly prevents the avowal. Quite a long while should be allowed for this game, as the men must contrive in all possible ways to prevent the proposal, and the girls, when they do get their mate cornered, should make as charming proposals as possible.

Those who do not wish to bring out the Leap Year idea, can let the men do the proposing and the girls the fencing.

The shops are full of suitable prizes for Valentine affairs,—heart-shaped bonbonnières, key-rings, photo frames, pin-cushions, lockets and appropriate books and pictures. And for consolation prizes, mittens, tea-cup and saucer, or a teapot, toy cat or parrot, a tiny sewing outfit for the men,—anything suggestive of spinsterhood or bachelorhood, will do.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

ARE you growing? Of course, I don't mean growing physically. I mean are you developing in any way, or are you standing still, or even retrograding?

It seems to me that is a question which each one of us ought to ask himself at least once a year. And what better time than this, the end of the first lap of the New Year, to ask it?

I'll tell you what made me think of this subject. A college girl who had been out of college ten years went to a reunion. At that reunion one of her classmates who is a music teacher played a piano solo. The first girl is a teacher but she understands a good deal about music and she realized at once that her classmate had improved to a wonderful degree in her playing. And not only did she play infinitely better than she had during her college days, but even better than she had three or even two years ago.

Then the first girl said to herself: "Gertrude has been growing every year since she left college. She hasn't stood still and rested on her laurels,—although she has had plenty of them,—one instant. She has just kept on developing. Now, am I doing that? Am I as much better, as a teacher, than I was the first year I left college; as Gertrude is as a musician? Am I a better teacher now than I was two or three years ago?"

And after she had put this question she wasn't at all sure what the answer ought to be.

Are YOU growing? Are YOU developing every year? Would anyone, who could understand, be able to see a distinct advance in your proficiency over your standard of two or three years ago?

Are you, each year, a better teacher, a more accurate proof-reader, a more efficient business man, a more gripping preacher?

Are you—I've saved this for a separate paragraph, because I know there would be a large class of people who would want to remind me that they did not need my question, because they had neither talent to develop, nor profession or business to master—are you each year a better home-maker, are you each year a more livable member of society?

You, who follow that most humble and yet most exalted profession of home-making, you whose talents are the talents of the soul and character rather than of the brain or fingers, remember that there is just as much technique in home-making as there is in piano playing. Remember that there are just as many gradations, just as vast possibilities for development and improvement in the art of livableness as in the art of painting or writing.

The greatest principle of life is perpetual growth. When anything in the vegetable world ceases to grow it begins to decay.

To a certain extent this is true in the immaterial world, also.

So, if you want to guard yourself and your powers from decay and decline, take the only sure method—keep on growing all the time.

Meat is so costly that never a scrap should be wasted. The bones can be used in soup and the gristle and tough portions likewise.

Breslau of Beef.—Mix a pint of chopped cold cooked beef with the yolks of three eggs; add a half pint of stock, two tablespoonfuls of butter and a half cup of bread crumbs, a cup of thin cream, a teaspoonful of salt and one of minced parsley, and pepper to taste. Put into buttered ramekins and set in a pan of water to bake in the oven. Cover with buttered paper and bake thirty minutes.

Ham Timbales.—Beat two eggs, add three-fourths of a cup of rich milk and a quarter of a cup of cream, one cup of chopped cold cooked ham, a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper, a fourth of a cup of soft bread crumbs. Mix all together and turn into buttered timbale molds, set in a pan of water and cover with buttered paper and bake until firm in the center. Turn out of the molds, surround with sauce and put a sprig of parsley in the top of each timbale. This may be steamed in a quart mold if desired.

Creamed Chicken With Curry of Rice.—Melt a fourth of a cup of butter, cook in it a fourth of a cup of flour and half a teaspoonful each of paprika and salt; gradually stir in a cup of milk and a cup of cream. Cook until smooth and thick, then add a pint of minced chicken. Keep hot over water.

Cook an onion in a tablespoonful of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of curry powder, a half cup of milk and a half cup of water. Cook until smooth. Have ready a half cup of cooked rice; add this to the curry mixture, remove the onion, add a tablespoonful of butter and a dash of pepper and dispose as a border on a dish with the creamed chicken in the center.

Old Fashioned Room—Homespun Linen, Woven Rugs and Silhouettes.

(By Alice E. Whitaker.)

If a blue Staffordshire pitcher on an old mahogany table will make you halt at a shop window just as soon as would a display of spring millinery then I am sure that you would like to hear about an old fashioned room that was shown to me today. It was not in a farm house nor yet in a fashionable country home but on the third floor of a city house of the kind that is all stairs.

A seat built round the bay window is upholstered in chintz reproduced from old patterns and among the other cushions are two covered with glossy corduroy such as few people ever see even in a sample.

The windows were dressed with full length such curtains of sheer muslin and side and top valances of Persian print in subdued colors and which it is always safe to put with old fashioned furnishings for they harmonize so well.

On the polished floor are woven cotton rugs of blue and white, each two yards long and fringed at the ends. A gilt framed looking glass, with a bunch of gay flowers framed in the upper quarter, hangs over a solid mahogany piece of furniture which might have been used originally for a wash stand but now serves the purpose of a dressing table at the head of the curved four poster.

The furnishings of this bed are homespun and woven blankets, a patch work quilt and a spread made from a linen sheet woven by some ancestor. As all handwoven linen was made in narrow widths this sheet has a seam but over it is laid a band of wide coarse clumsy insertion with another band crossing in the opposite direction; both are underlaid with blue. An edging to match the insertion is sewed to the sides and one end of the spread. The pillow cases are modern hem-stitched linen but a pair of homespun linen cases with initials in old English, or better yet in white cross stitch would be good if any had been available. A balance hangs round the bed showing below the spread.

The beautiful mahogany bureau with heavy brass trimmings would have drawn heavily on the owner's pocket book if it had not been an heirloom. It is the kind with narrow drawers at the back of the top and along this is laid a strip of linen edged with knit lace. The lower part of the top is furnished with a small hinged tray, with chintz under glass for the comb and brush, and a few other old fashioned things to complete the antique effect.

The wash stand, also of mahogany, holds the old time ewer and basin.

ANGEL DE CORA.

CREATES NEW INDIAN ART.

Carlisle, Pa.—In a plan for the preservation of the art of the American Indian, for the picturing of the Indian and his life as they existed, and not as a majority of the country's illustrators have imagined them, Lone Star and his wife, Angel De Cora, the only Indian artists of America, instructors in the United States Government Indian School here, have declared that the common idea of Indian features and customs is wrong.

Frederick Remington alone, among all the illustrators who took their subjects from the lives of the original American of the Western plains, says Lone Star, caught the true spirit of the Indian, and that because Remington lived among the Red Men.

Lone Star and Angel De Cora, both received education in American colleges. Angel De Cora, whose features are of a type as pretty as her name, studied four years at Smith College and received instructions in art under such masters as Howard Pyle, Joseph De Chump, Frank Benson and Edmund C. Tarbell.

A REGAL HEAD

How often do we hear or see this expression used in describing a beautiful woman.

Demote that head of its hair and instead of a queenly, royal bearing we have a fright. The hair makes all the difference. To have that glorious abundance of radiant hair which always crowns "a regal head," one should use Newbro's Herpicide.

Herpicide represents the last word in scientific hair culture. It destroys the dandruff germ, checks falling hair and corrects generally, diseases of the hair and scalp.

The positive results and its delicate but refreshing odor recommends Newbro's Herpicide to ladies of refinement everywhere.

"LOW SPEED" AT LUNCHEON

"When you go to luncheon, put on low speed." This is the advice of the Chicago Board of Health recently, in its weekly bulletin. On account of the difficulty that the average business man finds in taking the necessary time to masticate food properly and at the same time to relax so that the digestion may be normal the suggestion has been given in these hints that the noon meal be made very light, leaving the chief part of the food supply to be furnished in the evening.

Rather than join in the noon lunch-counter rush, it would be better to eat only a little fruit, unless one can take the time and possesses the police required for eating leisurely in the midst of bustle and confusion.

Thousands have attractive, regular features and are clever, bright and fascinating, but are handicapped by a sandy complexion. It has lately been discovered that old-fashioned colloid balsam is the "most" wonder-working application ever used for correcting this trouble. It can be had of any up-to-date druggist. An ounce and a half will completely restore the pink and white bloom of childhood by the very simple method of gradually and harmlessly flaking off the outer dead skin particles which conceal the fresh bloom underneath. Ordinary therapeutically used jelly is another simple remedy which works wonders in removing wrinkles, double chin, hollows, etc. Get a small quantity of any up-to-date drug store. It will make the skin taut and firm, even after one or two applications.

PLAYGROUNDS AND POLITICS.

THIS connection between municipal playgrounds and municipal politics may not, at first thought, be apparent. But Jane Addams sees a very close connection. "No one can become a ward boss in Chicago who hasn't grown up there and been leader of a 'gang,'" is the explanation which helped her, years ago, to understand why notoriously corrupt aldermen were elected year after year in spite of decent, law-abiding citizens' earnest desire for better local conditions.

Shrewdness and resourcefulness are the qualities that give the "gang" leader his position. He finds places where the boys can play "craps" or engage in other questionable pastimes, undisturbed by the police. Later he discovered saloons where drinking and gambling of minors will be winked at. He cultivates friendly relations with the alderman of the ward and other influential personages, and when members of his gang are arrested, he gets them off without punishment, or with a slight sentence.

But when the boys are taken from the streets into the playgrounds, new standards of leadership are established. Youthful energy is rightly directed, the need of the scout and protector disappears, the wholesome games of the public playgrounds take the place of those for which the hidden nook in the alley or street or vacant lot were required; gathering places, other than the saloons, are open for evening recreation; and infrequent arrests make the good offices of the mediator unnecessary. The establishment of municipal playgrounds is too recent to make it possible to see more than the beginnings of better things. But it looks as though they were likely to be a reforming influence in politics.

Raoul read it over again with fevered eyes. No more was needed to revive his hope. The number picture which he had for a moment imagined of a Christine forgetting her duty to herself made way for his original conception of an unfortunate, innocent child, the victim of imprudence and exaggerated sensibility. To what extent, at this time, was she really a victim? Whose prisoner was she? Into what whirlpool had she been dragged? He asked himself these questions with a cruel anguish; but even this pain seemed endurable beside the frenzy into which he was thrown at the thought of a lying and deceitful Christine. What had happened? What influence had she undergone? What monster had carried her off and by what means?

By what means indeed but that of music? He knew Christine's story. After her father's death, she acquired a distaste of everything in life, including her art. She went through the conservatoire like a poor soulless singing-machine. And, suddenly, she awoke as though through the intervention of a god. The Angel of Music appeared upon the scene! She sang, Margarita in Faust and triumphed!

The Angel of Music! . . . For three months the Angel of Music had been giving Christine lessons. Ah, he was a punctual singing-master! And now he was taking her for drives in the Bois!

Raoul's fingers clutched at his flesh, above his jealous heart. In his impetuosity, he now asked himself with terror what game the girl was playing? Up to what point could an opera-singer make a fool of a good-natured young man, quite new to love? O misery!

Thus did Raoul's thoughts fly from one extreme to the other. He no longer knew whether to pity Christine or to curse her; and he pitied and cursed her, turn and turn about. At all events, he bought a white domino. The hour of the appointment came at last. With his face in a mask trimmed with long, thick lace, looking like a pierrot in his white wrap, the viscount thought himself very ridiculous. Men of the world do not go to the opera ball in fancy-dress! It was absurd. One thought, however, consoled the viscount: he would certainly never be recognized!

This ball was an exceptional affair, given some time before Shrove-tide, in honor of the anniversary of the birth of a famous draftsman; and it was expected to be much gay, noisier, more Bohemian than the ordinary masked ball. Numbers of artists had arranged to go, accompanied by a whole cohort of models and pupils, who, by midnight, began to create a tremendous din. Raoul climbed the grand staircase at five minutes to twelve, did not linger to look at the motley dresses displayed all the way up the marble steps, one of the richest settings in the world, allowed no facetious mask to draw him into a war of wits, replied to no jests and shook off the bold familiarity of a number of couples who had already become a trifle too gay. Crossing the big crush-room and escaping from a mad whirl of dancers in which he was caught for a moment, he at last entered the room mentioned in Christine's letter. He found it crammed; for this small space was the point where all those who were going to supper in the Rotunda crossed those who were returning from taking a glass of champagne. The fun, here, waxed fast and furious.

Raoul leaned against a door-post and waited. He did not wait long. A black domino passed and gave a quick squeeze to the tips of his fingers. He understood that it was she and followed her.

"Is that you, Christine?" he asked, between his teeth.

The black domino turned round promptly and raised her finger to her lips, no doubt to warn him not to mention her name again. Raoul continued to follow her in silence.

He was afraid of losing her, after meeting her again in such strange circumstances. His grudge against her was gone. He no longer doubted that she had "nothing to reproach herself with," however peculiar and inexplicable her conduct might seem. He was ready to make any display of clemency, forgiveness or cowardice. He was in love. And, no doubt, he would soon receive a very natural explanation of her curious absence.

The black domino turned back from time to time to see if the white domino was still following.

As Raoul once more passed through the great crush-room, this time in the wake of his guide, he could not help noticing a group crowding round a person whose disfigure, eccentric air and gruesome appearance were causing a sensation. It was a man dressed all in scarlet, with a huge hat and feathers on the top of a wonderful death's head. From his shoulders hung an immense red-velvet cloak, which trailed along the floor like a king's train; and on this cloak was embroidered, in gold letters, which every one read and repeated aloud, "Don't touch me! I am Red Death stalking abroad!"

Then one, greatly daring, did try to touch him. . . . but a skeleton hand shot out of a crimson sleeve and violently seized the rash one's wrist; and he, feeling the clutch of the knuckledbones, the furious grasp of Death, uttered a cry of pain and terror. When Red Death released him at last, he ran away like a very madman, pursued by the jeers of the bystanders.

It was at this moment that Raoul passed in front of the funeral masquerader, who had just happened to turn in his direction. And he nearly exclaimed:

"The death's head of Perros-Guirec!"

He had recognized him! . . . He wanted to dart forward, forgetting Christine; but the black domino, who also seemed a prey to some strange excitement, caught him by the arm and dragged him from the crush-room, far from the mad crowd through which Red Death was stalking. . . . The black domino kept on turning back and, apparently, on two occasions saw something that startled her, for she hurried her pace and Raoul's as though they were being pursued.

They went up two floors. Here, the stairs and corridors were almost deserted. The black domino opened the door of a private box and beckoned to the white domino to follow her. Then Christine, whom he recognized by the sound of her voice, closed the door behind them and warned him, in a whisper, to remain at the back of the box and on no account to show himself. Raoul took off his mask. Christine kept hers on. And, when Raoul was about to ask her to remove it, he was surprised to see her put her ear to the partition and listen eagerly for a sound outside. Then she opened the door ajar, looked out into the corridor and, in a low voice, said:

"He must have gone up higher."

Suddenly she exclaimed: "He is coming down again!"

She tried to close the door, but Raoul prevented her; for he had seen, on the top step of the staircase that led to the floor above, a red foot, followed by another. . . . and slowly, majestically, the whole scarlet dress of Red Death met his eyes. And he once more saw the death's head of Perros-Guirec.

"It's he!" he exclaimed. "This time, he shall not escape me!"

But Christine had slammed the door at the moment when Raoul was on the point of rushing out. He tried to push her aside.

"Whom do you mean by 'he'?" she asked, in a changed voice. "Who shall not escape you?"

Raoul tried to overcome the girl's resistance by force, but she repelled him with a strength which he would not have suspected in her. He understood, or thought he understood, and at once lost his temper.

"Who?" he repeated angrily. "Why, he, the man who hides behind that hideous mask of death! . . . The evil genius of the churchyard at Perros! . . . Red Death! . . . In a word, madam, your friend. . . . your Angel of Music! . . . But I shall snatch off his mask, as I shall snatch off my own; and this time, we shall look each other in the face, he and I, with no veil and no lies between us; and I shall know whom you love and who loves you!"

He burst into a mad laugh, while Christine gave a desolate moan behind her velvet mask. With a tragic gesture, she flung out her two arms, which fixed a barrier of white flesh against the door.

"In the name of our love, Raoul, you shall not pass!"

He stopped. What had she said?

What you are returning? . . . For what hell are you leaving, mysterious lady? . . . or for what paradise?"

"I came to tell you, dear, but I can't tell you now. . . . you would not believe me! You have lost faith in me, Raoul; it is finished!"

She spoke in such a despairing voice that the lad began to feel remorse for his cruelty.

"But look here!" he cried. "Can't you tell me what all this means?"

"You are free, there is no one to interfere with you. . . . You go about Paris. . . . You put on a domino to come to the ball. . . . Why do you not go home?"

"What have you been doing this past fortnight?" . . . What is this tale about the Angel of Music, which you have been telling Mamma Valerius?"

Some one may have taken you in, played upon your innocence. I was a witness of it myself, at Perros. . . . but you know what to believe now!

You seem to me quite sensible, Christine. You know what you are doing. . . . And meanwhile Mamma Valerius lies waiting for you at home and appealing to your 'good genius'!"

Explain yourself, Christine, I beg of you! Any one might have been deceived as I was. What is this farce?"

Christine simply took off her mask and said: "Dear, it is a tragedy!"

Raoul now saw her face and could not restrain an exclamation of surprise and terror. The fresh complexion of former days was gone. A mortal pallor covered those features, which he had known so charming and so gentle, and sorrow had furrowed them with pitiless lines and traced dark and unpeppable shadows under her eyes.

"My dearest! My dearest!" he moaned, holding out his arms. "You promised to forgive me. . . ."

"Perhaps! . . . Some day, perhaps!" she said, resuming her mask; and she went away, forbidding him, with a gesture, to follow her.

He tried to disobey her; but she turned round and repeated her gesture of farewell with such authority that he dared not move a step.

Inquisitive Tommy.

An infirm old gentleman was visiting Tommy's family, and Tommy unfortunately had heard mention of one of the guest's peculiarities. Planting himself directly in front of his unhappy elder he sweetly inquired: "Which is your glass eye, Mr. Blankton? The one that moves, or the one that stands still?"

Composition of Precious Stones.

The infrequency of the opal is due to the amount of water in its composition and contraction fissures in the stone, but similar characteristics are found in other stones where films cause diffraction. The opalescence of the moonstone is caused by the enormous number of planes of separation in the stone, light being totally reflected from these planes.

Wm. J. Burns

PRODUCES IMPORTANT WITNESS

Washington, D. C.—William J. Burns, the indomitable detective who has run to ground more big political mysteries and death mysteries than probably any other living man, seems to bub up wherever there is a big case. For months the government has been seeking to get at the bottom of the Lorimer case. Now, at the psychological moment, the detective bubbles up solemnly with a witness and what he alleges proof that one of the former Lorimer witnesses committed perjury. To states that his evidence is so strong that it will result in sending many men higher up over the road.
